.WASHINGTON — U.S. Sens. John McCain and Jeff Flake are backing the Senate's latest effort to end the partial government shutdown, but only if it comes with protections for young immigrants known as Dreamers. Those are the latest twists in a months-long fight that has deepened partisan divides and triggered bitter accusations of both party excesses. In a statement late

Tuesday, the Arizona Republican and his fellow Republican said they'd support the "clean" continuing resolution offered by Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell if it could be combined with language that would protect Dreamers. McCain's and Flake's decision to side with Democrats and other Republicans who want the fix for Dreamers in a bill to end the shutdown comes as the health care debate roils the Senate and as the 2020 presidential campaign is heating up. However, neither side was willing to compromise Tuesday. "By supporting this bipartisan offer, we will not get everything we want," McCain said. "But the chance of getting nothing is even greater if we do not pursue this reasonable compromise." Flake, who has been generally at odds with his party this year, said the bill "ensures that the Homeland Security Department can protect our nation's borders without interference from Congress while at the same time giving us the time we need to pass our long-term solution for the Dreamers." Republicans have said any bill to end the shutdown must include money for border security. Democrats have vowed to block the border security measure in the Senate.

Democrats, in a statement, praised the GOP senators and the agreement they and other Republicans have reached for a temporary fix that would allow the federal government to reopen while the congressional delegation and President Donald Trump discuss comprehensive immigration legislation. Asked why he was backing a bipartisan approach that fell short of what he'd like to see, McCain said it was the best chance of success for Dreamers and others affected by the shutdown. Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer praised McCain and Flake. "Their commitment to Dreamers is crucial," Schumer said. Trump said in a tweet early Wednesday that the two Republicans "are to the surprise of almost everybody and for the first time, have supported a Bill that I like." McConnell said he would introduce his bill to reopen the

afternoon. Democratic leaders didn't immediately offer a counter-offer, but issued a warning Tuesday that they
